

Adam's Resume

The Resume

General Facts

- BA in Economics
- Lives in Portland, OR
- Likes short walks in the rain

Links

- Email
- Personal Website

Skills

Hard Skills

- Web Development | 3 Years
I use plain HTML/CSS/JS.
- Sys-Admin | 5 Years
Strong focus on Linux
- Python Programming | 4 Years
I mostly write it in a lightly functional style.
- Design | 4 Years
I am definitely not a savant at it, but I can iterate to a good design.

Soft Skills

- Communicating
I can understand anyone's perspective
- Writing
I've easily written a few hundred pages on various subject matters
- Problem Solving
I start by analyzing the desired outcome and construct a rough outline of the expected resources necessary to produce a desirable result.
- Funny
Well kinda funny
Okay kinda funny in the right context

About

I am currently looking for work, like all of us poor worker-bees. I don't really have strong feelings on what I want to do. I've worked on tech as a hobby for about a decade, so I've accumulated a fair amount of experience in a wide range of technical areas. So no, I won't care about being a WORKPLACE-HERO™ or any other "fun" corporate terminology. I am a skilled and self-motivated worker, who can easily excel in a good working environment.

Experience

Strang Hall | Restaurant

I did standard host/busser/waiter work. I took the job because I needed to be around people after lockdown. I left because I was moving to Portland.

ScriptPro | IT Customer Support

The company built pill dispensing machines, and I worked on customer support. So I remotely troubleshoot windows, physical machine failures and other related issues. I left because I needed to take some time to work through some mental health issues.

Personal Projects

I've worked on a variety of projects over the years, ranging from static-site-generators to viable-systems model network simulators to highly experimental stenographic theories. Unfortunately, I have also had the bad habit of hopping to a new shiny project before finishing old projects. So, I am currently in the process of reviewing and finishing up some of my old projects. Once I have finished a few, I will include a link to my portfolio in the links section.